

essential recipes for everyday cooking

KITCHEN SIMPLE

JAMES PETERSON
winner of 6 James Beard awards

KITCHEN SIMPLE

essential recipes for everyday cooking

JAMES PETERSON

TEN SPEED PRESS
Berkeley

Copyright © 2011 by James Peterson
Photographs copyright © 2011 by James Peterson
All rights reserved.

Published in the United States by Ten Speed Press, an imprint of the Crown Publishing Group, a division of Random House, Inc., New York.
www.crownpublishing.com
www.tenspeed.com

Ten Speed Press and the Ten Speed Press colophon are registered trademarks of Random House, Inc.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Peterson, James.

Kitchen simple / James Peterson. — 1st ed.

p. cm.

1. Quick and easy cooking. I. Title.

TX833.5.P48 2011

641.5'55--dc22

2011004435 eISBN: 978-1-60774-049-0

Cover design by Nancy Austin

v3.1

Contents

Acknowledgments

Introduction

Ingredients

Equipment

Cooking Techniques

HORS D'OEUVRES

Tapenade

Frico

Hot Cheese and Crackers

Gougères

Spicy Guacamole

Avocados with Hazelnut Vinaigrette

Avocados on Toast

Cold Leeks in Vinaigrette

Celeriac Rémoulade

Radish Toasts

Celery Sticks with Roquefort

Slow-Roasted Cherry Tomato–Garlic Toasts

White Bean Bruschetta

Prosciutto and Melon

Chicken Liver Bruschetta

Shrimp Cocktail

Barbecued Oysters

Oysters with Mignonette

Blinis

Salmon Tartare

Steak Tartare

Egg Salad Sandwiches

SOUPS

Leek and Potato Soup

Cream of Asparagus Soup

Cream of Pea Soup

Cream of Cauliflower Soup

Lentil Soup

Spring Vegetable Soup with Pesto

Chicken Broth

Fresh Corn Soup

Garlic Soup with Poached Eggs

Late Summer Tomato Soup
Mexican-Style Gazpacho
Tomatillo Soup
French Onion Soup
Miso Soup
Thai Hot and Sour Soup
Thai Chicken and Coconut Soup
Vietnamese-Style Aromatic Soup with Noodles

SALADS

Simple Green Salad
Caesar Salad
Iceberg Wedges with Roquefort Dressing
Curried Coleslaw
Winter Greens with Goat Cheese Toasts
Wild Dandelion and Bacon Salad
Wilted Radicchio Salad with Bacon and Oranges
Endive and Orange Zest Salad
Mushroom and Tarragon Salad
Fennel Salad
Baby Artichoke and Pecan Salad
Bell Pepper and Anchovy Salad
Asparagus and Morel Mushroom Salad
Thai Cucumber Salad with Peanuts
Indian Cucumber and Yogurt Salad with Mint
Moroccan Spiced Carrot Salad
Beets in Vinaigrette
Citrus Salad
Orange and Red Onion Salad with Black Olives
Tomato and Basil Salad
Tomato and Mozzarella Salad
Tuscan Bread and Tomato Salad
Bulgur Salad with Almonds and Herbs
Potato Salad
Parisian-Style Potato Salad
Chickpea and Mint Salad
Lentil Salad
Summer Steak Salad
Fresh Tuna Salad
Summer Duck Salad

VEGETABLES

Buttered Peas
Buttered Green Beans

Green Beans with Garlic, Anchovies, and Pepper Flakes

Sautéed Broccoli with Garlic

Japanese-Style Cold Broccoli Rabe

Broccoli Rabe with Garlic and Pine Nuts

Sautéed Zucchini with Garlic and Parsley

Sautéed Mushrooms with Garlic and Lavender

Red Cabbage with Bacon and Apples

Brussels Sprouts with Bacon

Cooked Cucumbers

Microwaved Artichokes

Baby Artichokes with Garlic and Thyme

Cold Watercress with Sesame and Ginger

Sautéed Spinach with Garlic

Sautéed Spinach with Pine Nuts and Raisins

Creamed Spinach

Creamed Sorrel

Swiss Chard with Garlic and Anchovies

Corn on the Cob

Creamed Corn

Glazed Radishes

Glazed Carrots

Glazed Shallots

Braised Fennel

Stuffed Zucchini

Leek Gratin

Cauliflower Gratin

Endive Gratin

Tomato Gratin

Tomatoes à la Provençale

Baked Eggplant

Eggplant Parmigiano

Stuffed Poblano Chiles

Roast Onions

Roast Root Vegetables

Winter Squash Puree

Sautéed Potatoes

Roast Potatoes

Gratin Dauphinois

Steamed Potatoes

Baked Potatoes

Mashed Potatoes

Fried Vegetables

Steamed Vegetables

Boiled or Steamed Asparagus

CHEESE DISHES

Quesadillas
Bacon and Gruyère Quiche
Grilled Country Ham and Aged Gouda Sandwiches
Goat Cheese Soufflés
Roquefort Soufflés
Cheese Fondue

SEAFOOD

Squid Braised in Red Wine
Fried Squid
Steamed Lobster with Parsley Sauce
Crab Cakes with Tartar Sauce
Soft-Shell Crab Sandwiches
Curried Shrimp Cakes
Sautéed Shrimp
Sautéed Scallops with Garlic and Parsley Butter
Steamed Mussels
Mussel Salad
Oyster Panfry
Clam Chowder
Garlic Fish Soup
Tuna Steaks with Saffron Aioli
Baked Halibut with Beurre Blanc
Fillets of Sole with Sherry
Salmon en Papillote with Tarragon
Salmon with Clams, Coconut Milk, Garlic, and Saffron
Skate with Capers and Lemon
Roast Whole Round Fish
Poached Whole Trout
Grilled Pompano
Grilled Sardines

PASTA AND GRAINS

Polenta
Sautéed Polenta
Couscous
Plain White Rice
Porcini Mushroom Risotto
Chipotle Chile Cornbread
Fettuccine Alfredo

Fettuccine with Pesto

Pasta Gratin

Pasta and Peas

Pasta with Porcini Mushroom Sauce

Spaghetti Carbonara

Spaghetti Cacio e Pepe

Spaghetti Puttanesca

Spaghetti with Clams or Mussels

Fussili with Cherry Tomatoes and Fresh Tuna

Fettuccine with Mussels and Saffron

Pappardelle with Shrimp, Garlic, and Olive Oil

Ricotta Ravioli in Broth

MEAT

Skirt Steak with Poblano Salsa

Grilled or Sautéed Porterhouse

Sautéed London Broil

Sautéed Flank Steak

Broiled New York Steaks with Béarnaise Sauce

Beef Daube

Roast Whole Beef Tenderloin

Beef Stroganoff

Red Wine Pot Roast

Beef Tacos

Roast Rack of Lamb

Roast Leg of Lamb

Sautéed Lamb Loin Chops with White Wine and Marjoram

Lamb Shish Kebabs

Roast Saddle of Lamb

Roast Pork Tenderloin with Sautéed Apples

Pork Tenderloin Medallions with Prunes

Roast Pork Loin with Fresh Sage

Sautéed Pork Chops with Mustard and Cornichon Sauce

Veal Chops with Wild Mushrooms

Roast Veal Shoulder Clod

POULTRY

Sautéed Chicken

Faux Chicken Mole

Chicken Tagine

Mock Coq au Vin

North Indian Grilled Chicken Kebabs

Chicken Saltimbocca

Roast Chicken

Baked Chicken

Asian Poached Chicken

Fried Chicken

Grilled Chicken

Grilled Chicken and Tropical Fruit Salad

Chicken Salad with Fresh Tarragon

Stir-Fried Chicken with Cashews and Snow Peas

Chicken or Turkey Enchiladas with Tomatillo Sauce

Chicken or Turkey with Curry and Sherry

Roast Turkey Breast

Slow-Roasted Duck Legs with Sauerkraut

Sautéed Duck Breasts

Duck Confit

Duck Confit and Wild Mushroom Salad

SAUCES

Hollandaise Sauce

Beurre Blanc

Clarified Butter

Béarnaise Sauce

Burgundian Red Wine Sauce

Béchamel Sauce

Basic Mayonnaise

Aïoli

Saffron Aïoli

Caper and Herb Sauce

Tartar Sauce

Chimichurri Sauce

Oven-Baked Tomato Sauce

Tomatillo Sauce

Mango Salsa

Applesauce

DESSERTS

Oranges with Raspberry Puree

Peach Melba

Chocolate-Dipped Strawberries

Raspberry Puree

Roast Pears with Butterscotch Sauce

Flambéed Pineapple Wedges with Rum or Kirsch

Pineapple Wedges with Kirsch

Bananas Flambeed with Rum

Strawberries Romanoff

Cherry Clafoutis

Apple Crumble

Raspberry Cobblers

Strawberry Shortcakes

Flavored Whipped Cream

Lime Curd

Passion Fruit Curd

Raspberry Soufflés

Chocolate Pudding

Individual Vanilla Custards

Yogurt with Cardamom and Saffron

Vanilla Panna Cotta

Chocolate Mousse

White Chocolate Mousse

Alsatian-Style Apple Tart

Crispy Apple Tart

Chocolate Tart with Raspberries

Baked Tart Shell

Fresh Fruit Tart

Cheesecake

Pound Cake

Angel Food Cake

Pavlova

Meringue Cups with Strawberry Ice Cream

Cream Puffs

Profiteroles

Crepes

Crepes Suzette

White Wine Granita

French Vanilla Ice Cream

Russian Tea Cookies

Basic Butter Cookies

Shortbread

Brownies

Zabaglione

BREAKFAST

Scones

Biscuits

Blueberry Breakfast Cakes

Golden Fruit Cake

Banana Bread

Apricot Bread

Popovers

French Toast

Pancakes

Waffles

Scrambled Eggs

Rolled Omelet

Poached Eggs with Buttered Croutons

Baked Eggs

Fried Eggs

HOT AND COLD DRINKS

Mango Mimosas

Passion Fruit Margaritas

The Perfect Manhattan

The World's Best Martini

Bellinis

My Favorite Limeade

Hot Chocolate

Index

Acknowledgments

I'm deeply indebted to a dedicated group of people who worked tirelessly to make Kitchen Simple come to fruition.

I'd like to thank Alice Piacenza for her hard work and input that made the photography and recipes what they are. I'd also like to thank Sara Kaluzshner for her enthusiasm, energy, and dedication.

I'm deeply grateful to the staff at Ten Speed Press for turning a raw manuscript into an actual book. First are my editors, Jenny Wapner and Dawn Yanagihara, whose incredible attention to detail kept the book on course. My copy editor, Andrea Chesman, cannot be thanked enough. I've never worked with anyone so thorough. Her attention to every possible detail was invaluable. The attractive design of the book and the layout of the photos is the work of Nancy Austin, whose eye and experience have proven indispensable. We could not have done it without her. And I must say thanks to Jean Blomquist who caught little (and sometimes not so little) mistakes and prevented them from showing up in the final book. Aaron Wehner, who oversaw the whole operation, also deserves high praise.

Last, but in no way least, are those people who surround me in my everyday life. They include my agents, Elise and Arnold Goodman with whom I have been working for over twenty years and who have, all that time, kept my interests at heart. Joel Hoffman has offered continued encouragement in my career and specifically for this book. His professionalism and pursuit of excellence are to be commended. And, of course, there is my husband, Zelik Mintz, whose love, commitment, and encouragement have sustained me for many years.

Introduction

Kitchen Simple is a book of simple recipes that can be executed in a half hour or less. It is designed for people who have worked all day and don't want to spend hours in the kitchen. And while some of the recipes may require a bit longer than a half hour to cook, most of the time is when a cake is baking or a pot is simmering away, and you are free to prepare another recipe, perhaps a side dish.

Kitchen Simple does make certain assumptions. It assumes you're smart but that you know little about cooking and just want to put good food on the table. In many of my books, there are pages and pages of context and explanation before the recipe proper begins. In Kitchen Simple, I get right to the matter at hand. Many of the recipes will be familiar and seem almost ridiculously easy, but they are included to remind you of the infinite possibilities of simple recipes. These simple recipes lend themselves well to improvisation such that you might find yourself fooling around in the kitchen inventing your own recipes.

While Kitchen Simple doesn't call for a lot of exotic ingredients, it does assume that you have access to a good supermarket, and that you're willing to shop. Keep in mind that it is helpful to have a pantry of dry goods and supplies so when you shop you're only looking for meat or fish, and produce. Most of the recipes in Kitchen Simple are inexpensive to prepare but it is not a book for cooking on the cheap or for someone on a diet. Many recipes contain small amounts of cream and butter. My attitude has always been that moderation in all things is best, including moderation itself.

A good number of the recipes in Kitchen Simple are designed as first courses. While Americans usually don't eat in courses (at least not at home), there are many dishes that work best when served on their own. Salads are a prime example of dishes that don't work as side dishes, yet most aren't substantial enough to be served as main courses. But remember, if you serve a salad as a first course, you can dispense with a vegetable to accompany the main course.

Kitchen Simple includes ideas for a well-stocked pantry so you can be prepared for unexpected guests or for nights when shopping is just not an option. And, while Kitchen Simple is not a technique book designed to teach the ins and outs (and the context) of various cooking styles, it does contain a discussion of the (surprisingly small number of) basic cooking techniques needed by any competent cook.

A few of the dishes are more time-intensive than others. These are included as weekend projects, and even though the cooking is long, the prep time is less than 30 minutes.

So how much time is needed to make an entire meal? Most of the dishes included here are designed to take a half hour of active preparation, not total cooking time. If you're making three dishes—a salad, a piece of fish, and a dessert for example—it's not going to take you an hour and a half to make the three dishes. The time will be closer to 45 minutes since the fish can be cooking while you're chopping vegetables for the salad. This is a good thing to keep in mind when constructing a menu—plan so that you can work on more than one dish at a time. Try to organize yourself so you're not making three dishes that require the stove or oven. For example, you might serve a salad as a first course, a piece of sautéed meat or fish as a main course, and roast potatoes as an accompaniment.

INGREDIENTS

You'll save a lot of time if you have a well-stocked pantry with things like olive oil, anchovies, pasta, dried beans, canned things, spices, dried herbs, and so on. When writing the book I've made several assumptions, including that you'll have a well-equipped pantry and a fairly well-equipped kitchen.

Anchovies

Most anchovies come packed in oil; look for ones packed in olive oil, and that come in bottles, not cans. You can also find anchovies packed in salt, which is preferable. If you find these, soak them in cold water for 30 minutes before you use them. They'll come tight-packed and will cling together; you should separate them as they soak. The best come from Sicily in large blue tins.

Baking Soda and Baking Powder

Don't confuse these two. Baking soda is sodium bicarbonate and releases carbon dioxide in the presence of an acid. Baking powder contains acid that releases carbon dioxide when it becomes moist. Baking soda is called for in baked goods that contain something acidic, such as sour cream. Baking powder is called for in situations where there's no ingredient that provides acid. Be sure to use "double acting" baking powder, which is what most baking powder is anyway.

Bay Leaves

Use imported bay leaves (most come from Turkey) instead of domestic (which come from California). Domestic bay leaves have a strong eucalyptus flavor that can overwhelm the other flavors.

Broth

The best broth is homemade starting with raw meat and bones. You can tell if your broth was successful by seeing if it gels in the refrigerator, which indicates it has the necessary gelatin to give body to soups and sauces. When making broth, it's imperative that it never reaches a hard boil or the churning will emulsify particles and fat into the broth. There are now better brands of low-sodium (low salt) broth, but they still don't gel in the refrigerator and are too salty to be boiled down (reduced) for a sauce.

Butter

These recipes were tested using unsalted butter. If you're using salted butter in a dessert, decrease the amount of salt added in the rest of the recipe. One stick of salted butter contains about $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt. So, if you have a recipe that calls for 1 teaspoon of salt and 1 cup (2 sticks) of butter, you know the butter is adding $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt. Therefore, you should c the salt down to ½ teaspoon.

Cream

All the cream called for is heavy cream or whipping cream which usually comes “ultra-pasteurized.” Ultra-pasteurized cream can be hard to beat, so if you can find just regular pasteurized cream, it is preferable (although not essential). Both of these have a high butterfat content and won’t separate when boiled. Don’t substitute light cream or half-and-half, which don’t thicken as well and may curdle. You can also use crème fraîche, which has a high butterfat content. Don’t substitute sour cream, which has a lower butterfat content and can curdle. You can make your own crème fraîche by inoculating 4 cups of cream with ½ cup buttermilk and leaving the mixture in a warm place for 24 hours.

crème fraîche

Eggs

The recipes in this book were tested with large eggs. White and brown eggs can be used interchangeably.

Flour

Flour varies from brand to brand. Recipes in this book were tested using King Arthur brand all-purpose flour, which is a relatively hard flour with a fair amount of gluten. If you’re using a different brand, you may find that your flour absorbs liquid less readily than King Arthur’s, so, when making tart dough, add less liquid than the recipe calls for, until you are certain it is all needed.

Meat Glaze (demi-glace)

It's handy to have meat glaze for thickening a pan sauce and giving it body. You can make your own meat glaze by cooking chicken broth down to a fraction of its original volume (definitely a weekend project), or you can buy commercial meat glaze. One of the better meat glazes is made by More-than-Gourmet, usually found in the gourmet section of the supermarket. Meat glaze can be stored in the refrigerator for several months and can be frozen indefinitely.

Milk

All milk used, except for buttermilk and coconut milk, is whole. Sometimes used for making custards, milk tends to curdle when simmered with other ingredients, especially vegetables. For this reason, it has to be stabilized with flour. The best known example of this is béchamel sauce.

Nut Oils

Nut oils turn rancid very quickly unless they're made from roasted nuts. Le Blanc brand is consistently the best brand I've found. Keep nut oils, such as walnut or hazelnut oil, in the freezer.

Nuts

Because nuts turn rancid rapidly, even in the refrigerator, a good trick is to toast them as soon as you get them and then store them in the freezer. Toasting brings out their flavor and impedes rancidity. To toast nuts, spread them out on a sheet pan and roast for about 10 minutes at 350°F, or until you can smell them.

Olive Oil

I use both "pure" olive oil, made by stripping the flavor from olive oil that doesn't make the grade to be called extra virgin olive oil. Pure olive oil is inexpensive (especially if you buy in large quantities) and doesn't have the sometimes fishy flavor that many vegetable oils have. When extra virgin olive oil is needed—in dishes where its aroma is not being cooked off—it's stated in the recipe; otherwise use pure olive oil.

Parsley

In general, I find fresh flat-leaf parsley to have more aroma than the curly variety, but feel free to substitute one for the other.

Pepper

Almost indispensable for savory foods, pepper comes in black, white, or green. Black pepper is the most commonly used because of its bold, round flavor. White pepper tends to be used for stuffings or in conjunction with other spices. It is also used when specks of black pepper would upset the appearance of, say, a cream soup. Green pepper is the underripe peppercorn and is often crushed or chopped and worked into sauces.

Salt

The recipes in this book have been tested using regular fine salt, except in some specialized recipes such as the radish toasts.

Sugar

All sugar is granulated unless otherwise stated.

Vanilla

Use authentic vanilla extract, not artificial. Artificial vanilla will give your baked foods a cloying mass-produced quality. If you're using vanilla beans, keep them tightly wrapped (first in plastic, then in foil) in the refrigerator.

Vinegar

All the vinegars called for in this book are wine vinegars. Good vinegar can be hard to find and, when you do find it, it's expensive. The best vinegar I've found is Banyuls vinegar (vinaigre de banyuls) but, again, it's hard to find and expensive. Champagne vinegar is a good all-round white wine vinegar. Sherry vinegar, especially if it's been aged, is usually of excellent quality. Balsamic vinegar, when authentic, is extremely expensive and isn't really meant for cooking. Inexpensive balsamic vinegar can be boiled down by half to give it more body and intensify its flavor. Although perhaps not simple, the best solution is to buy yourself an oak barrel and make your own vinegar by adding the ends of bottles of wine to the cask and keeping the cask in a warm place. In any case, buy the best (which is often the most expensive) vinegar you can find.

Flavored vinegars, such as tarragon vinegar, are made by infusing herbs or other flavorful ingredients in wine vinegar. Don't confuse flavored vinegars with vinegars that are actually made from different fruits or grains, such as cider vinegar or rice vinegar.

Wine

When white wine is called for, use a dry wine, preferably one with a lot of acidity. Sauvignon blanc is good and generic ones from France are very reasonable. Red wine should have a lot of body. Argentinean wines, especially Malbecs, are inexpensive and perfect for cooking. When using sherry, buy a dry fino or amontillado, which is simply an aged fino.

PANTRY

While the emphasis in this book is on fresh foods, it helps to have certain foods handy in the pantry. This is especially useful when cooking for unexpected guests.

- Anchovies
- Baking powder
- Baking soda (keep for only one year)
- Beans (dried)

- Capers: Capers come both packed in vinegar brine or packed with salt. If you're using capers packed in brine, just drain them before you rinse them. Salt-packed capers should be rinsed off before you use them.
- Chiles (dried and canned chipotles in adobo sauce)
- Cornmeal: You'll find that cornmeal comes in fine, medium, and coarse grains. Most of the time these can be used interchangeably.
- Flour (just all-purpose white; whole wheat is too perishable to store for long periods.)
- Jam
- Lentils (dried)
- Olive oil (pure and extra virgin)
- Pasta (dried)
- Pepper (just black will do; white is nice for cream soups)
- Rice (short-grain for risotto; long-grain, especially basmati, for other dishes)
- Salts (ideally a variety, but one—just plain fine salt—will do)
- Spices (including cloves, cumin, coriander, cinnamon, cardamom, and nutmeg, ground or whole. (If whole, you'll have to grind them yourself in a coffee grinder.)
- Sugar (granulated and confectioners')
- Tomatoes (canned)
- Vanilla (extract will do, but beans are nice)
- Vinegars (white wine, red wine, sherry, balsamic)

EQUIPMENT

You can survive with very little kitchen equipment, but a few lesser-known items are surprisingly essential or will save you an enormous amount of work. Vegetable slicers and peelers, food mills, and of course sharp knives, will prove almost essential. Much of the other equipment listed here you'll be able to get around with a little improvisation.

Baking Dishes

An assortment of baking dishes in various sizes and shapes is almost essential for cooking a number of dishes. Pyrex is good (it typically comes in 8-inch squares and in 9 by 13-inch rectangles), and oval copper gratin dishes are lovely and can be used both for cooking and presenting at the table. Oval copper gratin dishes come in assorted sizes and aren't as expensive as you might think because the copper isn't that thick. Porcelain is also good for quiche dishes and soufflé dishes. Soufflé dishes come in assorted sizes and can be used for individual servings or for serving a small group.

Baking Sheets

Your best bet is to buy half-sheet pans (one is enough but two are better) from a restaurant supply store. They'll be made of aluminum and they'll be cheap. They come in a standard size, about 13 by 17 inches. You may want to invest in nonstick sheet pans, but an even better idea is a reusable silicone mat to which nothing ever sticks. Their only disadvantage is that they're a bit expensive.

If your baking sheets are thin, and many of them are, you may want to double them up to help them cook evenly. You can even go as far as sprinkling the bottom one with water to help prevent the bottom of cookies or other pastries from burning. If you're feeling flush, you may want to buy French baking sheets, which are made of iron and are of a thicker gauge, so they cook more evenly with less likelihood of burning.

Blenders

If you don't have a food mill, a blender is imperative for pureeing soups and sauces. There are two types: the regular blender with a stand and the immersion blender.

If you are buying a stand blender, choose one with a solid, heavy base and only two or three settings—not one with twenty different buttons for pureeing. Those with fewer settings are usually better made. When using a blender to puree hot mixtures, never fill it more than halfway full and hold the top on firmly with your hand wrapped in a towel. This prevents the mixture from shooting out and burning you.

If you blend soups or sauces with any regularity, I highly recommend an immersion blender. This is a long rod with blender blades attached to one end. You can submerge an immersion blender in a soup or sauce and puree it, without the cumbersome moving from blender to pot.

Bowls

Buy a set of inexpensive mixing bowls in glass, glazed pottery, or stainless steel. I don't know if they make aluminum bowls, but if they do, avoid them because they discolor eggs.

If you like making sponge cakes or soufflés, you'll find that egg whites beaten in a copper bowl retain their height better after baking. If you don't have a copper bowl insert for your stand mixer, you may want to get one for beating egg whites. If you want to beat your egg whites by hand, buy the largest copper bowl you can find (small ones are decorative, but because they limit the motion of the whisk, they make beating more difficult). Clean the bowl with a handful of salt and a splash of vinegar each time you use it. Make sure it is perfectly clean (rinse it after the salt process) and dry before using.

Cookie Cutters

The best approach is to buy a set of fluted cutters and a set of plain cutters. There are usually about twelve cutters in a set and they vary in size from about 4 inches in diameter to ½ inch in diameter. These are almost essential for cutting out biscuits and cookies.

Cutting Boards

Not so many years ago, all restaurants were compelled to replace their wooden cutting boards with plastic. But not long after that, it was discovered that wooden boards harbor less bacteria and are therefore safer.

You'll need at least two cutting boards: a small one for slicing lemons, mincing shallots and so on, and a large one for chopping herbs, meat, fish, and so on. Buy cutting boards without feet of any sort so you can turn the board over and use both sides. Some people go so far as to label the side of the board they use for garlic or onions. One side of your large cutting board should have a moat around it for catching the juices of roasts.

Drum Sieve

This is a bit of an exotic item—essentially a wooden or metal ring with a sheet of fine mesh metal or nylon screen pulled over it—but nothing works like a drum sieve for making purees perfectly smooth. Wooden drum sieves with nylon mesh are less expensive than metal drum sieves. Unfortunately, they don't allow you to change the screen, so when they wear out they're finished. Metal drum sieves, on the other hand, allow you to insert different mesh screens. The metal screens never seem to wear out.

Dutch Ovens

A Dutch oven is a large pot or kettle, often made of cast-iron, with a tight-fitting lid. Such pots are great to have around for slow-cooked braised dishes, such as the pot roast. The Creuset brand makes excellent enamel-coated Dutch ovens. A large oval Dutch oven is perfect for most pot roasts, but ideally the Dutch oven should match the size of the pot roast as closely as possible.

Food Mill

Many people think of this device as an anachronism but, in fact, it's the perfect gadget for pureeing and straining at the same time. It's very useful for making soups and for sauces such as tomato sauce or tomatillo sauce. When buying a food mill, buy the largest one you can find. (There are beautiful tin-coated large ones from France but they're hard to find and expensive.) It should have removable inserts to make purees with different textures.

Food Processor

While not essential, these make short work of many kitchen tasks, especially when it comes to pureeing solid mixtures. (Don't buy miniature food processors—their motors aren't strong enough.)

Grills

Grills come in various shapes and sizes. The least expensive are little hibachis that sit on the ground. These are good to have because they typically have heavy metal bars that form the grill (which leave distinctive grill marks), and the distance of the grill from the coals can be controlled. The disadvantage to hibachis is their size (of course you can always use two) and the fact that they have no cover.

Most typical on people's patios is the classic Weber kettle grill, which has a cover. The disadvantage to this design is the grill grate, which is made of thin metal, almost like thin wire, and the fact that the distance of the grate from the coals can't be controlled. Weber now makes some more expensive grills that have the requisite heavy metal grill grate and leave the distinctive grill marks.

Gas grills are becoming increasingly popular and for good reason. They impart as much grilled flavor as briquettes. The one disadvantage is that many don't allow you to burn wood or sawdust to impart a distinctive flavor to grilled foods.

Kitchen Towels

Don't buy terry cloth, which catches on fire very easily. One trick used by professional cooks is to use towels as pot holders. Wearing a towel tucked into the apron keeps it always handy.

Knives

One can hardly imagine cooking without knives. They come in all shapes and sizes and price ranges, all enough to leave us baffled. Fortunately, you really only need two knives to do most essential cooking tasks (what an awful word).

First, you'll need a chef's knife, which will be your most important investment. The length will depend on your preference, but I recommend going a couple of inches longer than you may feel comfortable with—at first. A 10- to 12-inch blade knife is usually best. The length makes it easier to chop bunches of herbs, vegetables, and other ingredients quickly and easily.

Second, you'll need a paring knife with a 3-inch blade. It will come in handy for peeling.

When buying a knife, don't start out with an expensive German knife, but try knives that can be had for a third of that price. Most knives are stainless steel these days, which has the advantage of not staining certain vegetables or eggs. Stainless steel is very hard to sharpen, and it sometimes seems true that less expensive knives, made from softer steel, are easier to sharpen in this regard. You can always go with carbon knives (which are easier to sharpen and are among my favorites), but they are hard to find, they rust easily, and, again, stain certain foods. You may want a narrow-blade boning knife, if you cut up a lot of meat, and a carving knife (with as long a blade as possible) for slicing roasts. Last, if you cut up fish, you may want a flexible filleting knife.

Ladles

Have at least two sizes: a 2-ounce and a 6- or 8-ounce. The small size is convenient for working mixtures through strainers (a ladle works much more efficiently than a spoon) and for ladling out sauces. The large size is handy for ladling soups and broths.

Measuring Cups and Spoons

There are two types of measuring cups: dry and liquid. The dry measuring cups are designed to allow you to sweep the straight edge of a knife across the top to create an exact measurement. The liquid measuring cups are transparent, have excess capacity to allow you to fill up to

- click Collected Plays, Volume 1
- read Circus of the Damned \(Anita Blake, Vampire Hunter, Book 3\)
- download online Abstraction in Avant-Garde Films \(Studies in Cinema\) pdf
- Concepto de ideologÃa. Volumen 3. Irracionalismo, historicismo y positivismo: Nietzsche, Mannheim y Durkheim pdf, azw \(kindle\), epub
- read South African Art Now
- read online Bear Island

- <http://junkrobots.com/ebooks/The-Void-of-Mist-and-Thunder--The-13th-Reality--Book-4-.pdf>
- <http://korplast.gr/lib/Agroecology--The-Ecology-of-Sustainable-Food-Systems.pdf>
- <http://paulczajak.com/?library/Breakneck--Kitt-Lundgren--Book-2-.pdf>
- <http://korplast.gr/lib/Art-of-Computer-Programming--Volume-3--Sorting-and-Searching.pdf>
- <http://wind-in-herleshausen.de/?freebooks/South-African-Art-Now.pdf>
- <http://academialanguagebar.com/?ebooks/Until-Friday-Night--Field-Party--Book-1-.pdf>